When in Rome, Do as the Romans Do

by Yi-Xiang Ju, Class 205

This summer I studied English at a boys' school in London and lived with an English family, the Crawfords. At their home, I learned the differences between Taiwanese and English cultures.

At the dinner table, people in the UK always have soup before other food. But in Taiwan we often have it as the last dish. When we are sick, we can go to a doctor at any time. But the English always call their doctors before they go to see them.

The two cultures are different in education. Taiwanese parents usually help their kids with their work. But English parents want their kids to solve problems by themselves. However, both Taiwanese and English families are kind to new friends. The Crawfords helped me a lot during my stay. I really enjoyed the life in London and learned a lot about English culture.

Derek Williams sold cheap shoes. He had a small truck, and he bought the shoes from the factory.

He took the shoes from one house to another and tried to sell them. He sold a lot of his shoes in small towns because there were not many shops there, and people did not want to go to the city to buy shoes.

One day, Derek drove along the street of a small town and stopped in front of one of the houses. There was a little boy, Charlie, beside the door. Derek opened the window of his truck and called to the boy, "Hello. Is your mother at home?" Charlie looked at him and then answered, "Yes, she is." "That's good," Derek said, and he smiled. He got out of his truck, took some shoes from the back and went to the door of the house. He knocked at the door, but no one opened it.

After a moment, Derek knocked at the door again and waited for a few minutes, but the door did not open again. Then Derek looked at Charlie and said in an angry voice, "Your mother is not at home." "She is," Charlie answered. "Then why didn't she open the door?" Derek asked. "Because this isn't my house," Charlie said.
